

"A Hands-on Approach to Optimal Stopping".
Andreas Kyprianou, Bath University, UK

Abstract:

This short course will look at some of the fundamental principles of the theory of optimal stopping. Having started briefly with some general theory, we will consume the majority of the course by taking a 'hands-on' approach and looking at a number of case studies. Of particular interest will be problems driven by Markov processes, and moreover Markov processes with jumps.